

BEING MUSLIM & BRITISH

PROUD TO BE BRITISH

Muslims in Britain are proud to be part of British society and are encouraged by their faith to be active, positive citizens. For a Muslim, their faith guides their personal morals, like being honest and charitable, while also respecting the law of the land.

DID YOU KNOW?

The first mosque in Britain was established in Liverpool in 1889

Islamic principles require Muslims to honour the laws and social contracts of the country they live in.

Muslims have been contributing to all parts of British society, from the NHS to business and the arts, for generations.
